Millipore Sigma

(... and Squantum, Cathedral of the Pines, Rindge Meetinghouse & Cemetery)

UTUMN is just around the corner and soon we'll be headed off on our ANNUAL AUTUMN OUTING. This year we won't be straying far from home. Our first stop will be right in Jaffrey—a visit to Millipore Sigma, our largest employer. It has an interesting history in Jaffrey which we'll learn about as we tour its modern facilities on Turnpike Road. We'll then drive south along Prescott Road to Squantum, one of Jaffrey's earliest settlements, where we'll stop for a few minutes to learn about its past and present as a mill village. We'll then cross into Rindge and drop in at the Cathedral of the Pines where we'll hear about its past and future. Bruce Hill will be our host. Our final stop will be Rindge Center where we'll visit the 1792 Meetinghouse and, weather permitting, walk through the adjacent cemetery. Our host will be Burt Goodrich who chairs the Meetinghouse Oversight Committee and the Cemetery Trustees. Around 5 pm those who are interested will end up for a special dinner at Sunflowers (see insert page.)

For more about Millipore Sigma go to its website at http://www.emdmillipore.com/US/en. More on Squantum may be found at http://www.rs41.org/squantum.htm. And the Cathedral of the Pines at https://www.cathedralofthepines.

TOME to the Jaffrey Civic Center where we'll congregate, arrange some carpooling, and head on our way at 1:15 pm sharp to Millipore Sigma. Or you can go directly there to arrive by 1:30pm. 👻

GREETINGS FROM THE PRESIDENT,

OUR ANNUAL MEETING on August 8th, was held at the beautiful Grand View Estate at the invitation of Pam Royce, General Manager, and Jaffrey Historical Society member. We held a business meeting that concluded with an election of officers and directors, shared the history of the property from Milliken's Tayern to the present operation, toured the main house, and enjoyed bounteous refreshments. It was an enjoyable evening thanks to planning by Charlie Turcotte, Jackie Johnson, Henry Hammond, Vicki Arceci, and Diane Schaumann. Rob Stephenson provided visual projection for the program, Gary Arceci served as bartender, and special guest David Despres brought Georgina Yeatman's airplane propeller and first-hand knowledge of the Yeatman farm operation. We are grateful to owner Paula Geraghty and Manager Pam Royce for their warm hospitality and delicious desserts. It's enlightening to visit important historical landmarks in Jaffrey and we hope to do more in the coming years.

Our executive team of officers and our chairs of special activities continue to work diligently, making our organization active and alive. We attract new members, receive multiple inquiries, create exhibits, share media, lead tours, and plan interesting programs. Thank you to all who give of their time and effort to preserve and share the history of Jaffrey.

Laban Ainsworth Book Launch

THE Society's newest publication—Laban Ainsworth: A Life—was launched at the Meetinghouse on July 27th. This biography of Jaffrey's first settled minister was written by Jean Parker Waterbury and was never published in its entirety until now. The book appears as two-volumes-in-one, the second volume being all new material including many photographs, maps, documents, many never seen before. Speaking at the launch were Bancroft Greene and David Torrey (Ainsworth descendants), Holly Manley (the author's daughter), Mary Jo Marvin and Rob Stephenson. The book is available at the Civic Center in hardbound and softbound versions.

See http://www.rs41.org/jhs/laban2.htm for more information.

The Annual Meeting

One of the historical highlights of the very well-attended Annual Meeting was David Despres' recollections of life at Chislehurst Farm (present-day Grand View Estate). Attendees enjoyed tours of the premises and fine food & drink.

Schoolhouse No. 1

Years later—Who would have thought?

In the nineteenth century Jaffrey had 13 school districts each served by a one-room schoolhouse. Of these, five survive today as residences, and one—The Little Red Schoolhouse (No. 11)—stands on the Common beside the Meetinghouse (1775), moved there and restored in 1960 to its original schoolhouse appearance by the Jaffrey Historical Society.

Schoolhouse No. 1, on Route 124 (the old Third New Hampshire Turnpike) at the corner of Prescott Road, was built in 1816 by Oliver Prescott to replace the original 1790 structure that had burned two years before.

From the exterior there's nothing remarkable about this particular building; and there's nothing remarkable about old schoolhouses still being around and converted to other uses. One can probably find a handful in just about any New Hampshire town. But Schoolhouse No. 1 has a remarkable connection to the world beyond little Jaffrey, a connection that could never be guessed at.

Across the street from the former schoolhouse stands The Benjamin Prescott Inn. This was once owned by Dr. Vannevar Bush (1890-1974). Bush, a distinguished engineer and scientist, was a seasonal

Jaffrey resident from around 1937 until the early 1960s. He is probably most famous as the initiator and administrator of the Manhattan Project, the secret World War II effort to develop the first atomic bomb. (He oversaw an astonishing employees!) 130,000 Bush had a long and close association with M.I.T., as a student, faculty member and administrator (Dean of the School of Engineering and Vice President of the Institute). He was one of the founders of what became the Raytheon Corporation; and was an early advocate for the creation of the National Science Foundation. He was president of the Carnegie Institution, chairman of Merck & Co. and sat on numerous corporate boards including AT&T, and served on many scientific and engineering committees. Probably no more acclaimed personage ever spent time in Jaffrey.

So it's easy to imagine that when Vannevar Bush—Pete Sawyer remembers that he always said "call me Van"—was in Jaffrey, away from the stress and commitments of Cambridge, Washington and the world, he might cross the road to the old Schoolhouse No. 1—which he had fitted up as a laboratory and study—and ponder such things as atom bombs, analog computers and precursors of the World Wide Web. In the doorway he might have paused and looked to the east over the pasture land he then owned. If he were to do so today he would see a major industrial complex: Millipore Corporation, founded by his son, John, in 1954.

Remarkable connections, indeed!

—Prepared by Rob Stephenson. Appeared in the Keene Sentinel, September 18, 2012.

Some of the Sights/Sites on our Outing

Millipore Sigma

In 1954, a modest filtration company with just a handful of employees, opened for business. The company pioneered the use of membrane technology in hundreds of applications. Later changing its name to Millipore Corporation to reflect its growing range of products and expanded core capabilities, the company would expand to a global, billion-dollar life science corporation. Today, it is Jaffrey's largest employer.

Schoolhouse No. 1

Now a private residence, this early schoolhouse was once Vannevar Bush's laboratory and get-away. He lived across the road in what is now the Benjamin Prescott Inn.

Sauantum

The Annett Homestead across the common in Squantum—once Prescottville—in the southeast corner of Jaffrey. It's been a site of mills and industry since the earliest days of the town.

Cathedral of the Pines

Situated on a hilltop with a panoramic view of the Grand Monadnock, the Cathedral of the Pines is a breathtaking open-air cathedral and meeting space on 236 acres.

The Second Rindge Meetinghouse (1796)

This structure replaced the town's first meetinghouse on the same site. It combines both civic and religious functions. The adjoining cemetery dates to 1764 and is the resting place of many of Rindge's early settlers.

Optional after-outing dinner at Sunflowers

TOP OFF our Autumn Outing those who wish are invited to congregate around 5pm at Sunflowers right in the heart of downtown Jaffrey.
